Consultative Psychological Evaluation

Our independent psychological evaluations provide the medical evidence that is necessary to secure disability benefits. After meeting with your client, we prepare a detailed written report including a comprehensive assessment of claimant and collateral sources, as well as, objective psychological testing, which specifically addresses your client's psychological impairment, mental status and functional capacities. Furthermore, we make it our top priority to provide written reports within 10 business days and sometimes earlier depending on circumstances.

A psychological evaluation generally begins with a diagnostic interview, when our clinician will attempt to get a detailed personal history with an emphasis on how one's disability and how that disability impacts one's ability to maintain employment and other daily life skills. Depending on the presenting problem(s), your client will complete psychological testing. Also, any relevant medical records will be reviewed and integrated into the information obtained during the evaluation and this will provide additional medical evidence.
